4 A Posthumous George Cross to O. S. Bennett Southwell, P/JX 204557 23rd January 1941. Extremely fine. 6

Extract from The Story of the George Cross:
"I found my seventeenth and last one in Hoxton in the East End of London. A large area of tenement property had been evacuated and "Unexploded Bomb" notices erected round it. Supplied with all available information, my rating, Able Seaman Bennett Southwell, and I set off down the drab street. Those solitary walks towards the location of a mine always reminded me of the last scenes in the pictures of Charlie Chaplin—I had the feeling that a vast audience was watching the way I walked—and it had been the last scene for many of my friends.
"The mine had crashed through the roof of a house and made a great ragged-edge hole and the slates littered the street and pavement. It was an ordinary working-class home in this part of London, one of a continuous structure of two-storied erections made more miserable by the stillness and the emptiness of all the houses in the street. Through the windows of the parlour I saw the little proud possessions of ornaments, plants and coloured photographs of soldier and sailor sons. The mine, a Type C, hung suspended through a hole in the ceiling its nose within six inches of the floor. I decided to dismantle the mine as it hung. I called my rating into the hallway and explained the position. He would remain in the passage and pass me through the door whatever tools I required.

"I had been working on it for perhaps a minute when the bomb slipped in front of me. There was a sound of falling brickwork as the chimney pot overhead collapsed; I heard the whirr of the bomb mechanism and I knew that I had exactly twelve seconds to live. I shouted a warning to the rating to run and then ran myself. I was through the hall in two leaps. As I emerged from the doorway I saw the rating running down the street to what he, poor devil, thought was safety. I had no time to use distance for safety and ran across the roadway to a surface air-raid shelter opposite. I reached it and flung myself on its far side, its bulk between me and the house I had just left. I heard no explosion. It has since been explained to me that if you are near enough to an explosion of such tremendous force unconsciousness is upon you before the sound reaches you, which is a very merciful thing. I was blinded by the flash that comes split seconds before the explosion, but that was all I experienced. I do not know what time passed before I became conscious. When I did I knew I was buried deep beneath bricks and mortar and was gradually being suffocated! My head was between my legs and I guessed my back was broken (as it was), but I could not move an inch. I have no idea how long I remained embedded in my grave. Men dug me out eventually. Most of the time I was unconscious. The conscious moments were of horror and utter helplessness. Being buried alive is certainly a good example of a living hell, and in the war years that followed, the brave men and women and the children of London and other cities who endured this horror had my sympathies and my prayers. I really did know the physical and mental torture they endured.

"My rating was killed—beheaded by the blast. The mine destroyed six complete streets and it was six weeks before the body was found amongst the rubble. He was a brave man and left behind a brave widow. I saw her receive her husband's George Cross from His Majesty the King."

8 N.G.S. 1793-1840, one bar, Egypt (Geo. Fox, Lieut, R.N.). Nearly very fine. 1

Born 28 Sept., 1773, at Scarborough, Co. York. This officer entered the Navy, 26 July 1795 as A.B. aboard "Malabar" 54, Capt. Parr, which ship after assisting at the reduction of Demerara, Essequibo, Berbice and St. Lucie, foundered on her passage home from the W. Indies, 10 Oct., 1796. Mr. Fox, who then joined the "Pelter", gunbrig, subsequently became Midshipman of the "Pallas" 36, Capt. Hon. Curzon, and in that ship was wrecked, in Plymouth Sand, 4 April, 1798. During the next two years he served in the "Foudroyant", "Barfleur" and "Queen Charlotte", and served at the blockade of Malta. In Feb. 1800 he assisted Lord Cochrane in navigating "Le Généreux", a French ship of the line, which had just been captured, to Minorca; after which he accompanied his lordship into the "Speedy", 14, assisted at the capture of a sevee of greatly superior force, and as being invested with the charge of the prize, and of a convoy, succeeded in beating off two powerful row-galleys. In June 1800, having joined the "Minotaur" 74, he witnessed the fall of Genoa; from the mole of which place he had the singular good fortune, after the battle of Marengo, of affecting the deliverance of a British 64 and two transports, all of which but for his own individual exertions wauld have been destroyed. The courage and ability displayed on this occasion were so marked as to render his enrolment among the officers of their ship an object of ambition to many of the Captains of Lord Keith's Fleet, but so high was the opinion entertained of his merits by the Admiral that he was unwilling to part with him, and in consequence retained his services until promoted Lieut. Previously Mr. Fox had attended the expedition to Egypt, and had the honour, when Sir Ralph Abercromby was brought on board with his death wound, to conduct the heroic chief to the cabin which had been assigned to his use. His after appointments were to the successive commands, 4 Feb., 1804, of the "Sheerness" tender, 29 Sept. 1810, of the "Watchful", a similar ship, and 25 May, 1815 of the "Brevdrageven", a gun-brig, which he paid off 24 Aug., following. He retired as Commander, 28 Jan. 1847.

On November 22nd, 1897, at Dwatoi, Lieutenant Jones, commanding "D" Company, while superintending the erection of a sangar of stones, saw that some Afridis, ensconced behind some stones to his front, were firing upon "C" Company on his flank. He called for volunteers and, followed by a few men, ran down the hill. When he got near the Afridis, he jumped onto a rock and emptied his revolver among them, causing them to run away. Some other Afridis, about 600 yards off opened fire and he fell dead. One of the three men with him, L/Cpl. F. A. Brunton, was hit in going to his assistance. Sergt Griffiths decided to go back for help while Pte. Dangerfield remained with his wounded comrade and the body of his officer, keeping up a steady fire until help arrived. Private Dangerfield, besides receiving the Distinguished Conduct Medal, which was one of five awarded to the Regiment during the war, was promoted Corporal. Submitted to the Queen, July 9th, 1898.

On 1st Sept., 1942, Sgt. Macgregor commanded a Light Tank Troop which was sent out on a wide recce to the west, along the Southern slopes of the Bare Ridge. An enemy column, which included 10 Tanks moved north between the patrol and the Regt. Sgt. Macgregor, by first class leadership, and displaying great gallantry fought his way back to the Regt. without loss.
By his vigorous offensive action the enemy were deceived as to the strength of the force attacking him and took cover which they retained for the remainder of the day. This NCO has displayed conspicuous courage and devotion to duty throughout the battle and has set an excellent example to all with whom he has worked."

"On 30th Sept., 1944, SSM Macgregor was in command of a troop of tanks which was ordered to attack Middelrose village (MR 3942 Sheet S'Hertogenbosch) in conjunction with a section of carriers and a platoon of infantry. As soon as the advance started the enemy brought down heavy observed shellfire on the attacking troops and after 300 yards the infantry and carriers were brought to a halt by MG fire. Realising that the whole attack was in danger of being held up and knowing full well the risk attached to advancing in such close country without infantry support, SSM Macgregor moved forward with his troop, destroyed the MGs holding up the infantry and one A tk gun which he met face to face at 50*yds range and reached the centre of the village. The infantry then came up and SSM Macgregor moved to a position from which he could shoot the enemy withdrawing from the village and observe the enemy's main position. He remained in this position under continuous shellfire and mortar fire and sniping for seven hours directing artillery fire on to enemy guns. During this action SSM Macgregor's troop destroyed* 2 A tk guns and 2 MGs and took 20 PsW, besides killing a number of enemy and forcing 200 to withdraw from the village. This WO's coolness, courage and judgment were entirely responsible for the success of the action and had it not been for his leadership and handling of the situation, both his own troop and the infantry would have undoubtedly suffered severe casualties without reaching their objectives."

Citation from "The Tank Corps Book of Honour".
On 27th Sept. 1918 on the occasion of the attack on Flesquiers, Pte. Brown drove his tank in the face of heavy shell fire until after reaching the objective his tank was knocked out by a direct hit. Pte. Brown then established a machine gun post regardless of danger making several journeys under heavy hostile machine gun fire at close range for guns and ammunition. Throughout the action he displayed conspicuous courage and initiative.

SALE CATALOGUES

On the average we issue twelve or more Coin Catalogues and three Naval & Military Medal Catalogues each year, some of which are usually of Sales of important Collections.

CATALOGUE SUBSCRIPTIONS

Sale Catalogues, frequently illustrated, are normally posted to Subscribers about three weeks prior to the date of Sale.

Lists of "Prices Realised" are issued after each Sale, thus giving at a glance a reliable guide to value. The final test of value must always be auction prices rather than the figures given in books of reference, for changing times and fashions soon render the latter obsolete and misleading. The Lists of "Prices Realised" will probably be enclosed in a following Sale Catalogue.

AIR MAIL POSTAGE

To allow subscribers resident outside Europe time to submit Postal Bids, Sale Catalogues will, if desired, be sent by Air Mail. Air Mail postage is not, however, included in the Subscription Rate and the cost must be borne by the Subscriber. In such cases a deposit against the cost is required.
